TWO INJURED

When Street Car Jumped the Track Late Yesterday Afternoon in East Second Street

Mrs. Addie Hill and Mr. A. L. Merz
Badly Hurt But Will Recover

Yesterday afternoon about 5:45 o'clock a very serious accident happened to car No. 27, of the Maysville Street Railway Co., in charge of motorman Henry F. Otto. Just after the car had crossed Union street going east, it is supposed to have struck a stone on the track, which caused it to jump the track and turn square around, north and south, and run across the pavement on the north side of Second street.

Mr. A. L. Merz and Mrs. Addie Hill, who were among the passengers, were thrown from their seats to the ground with considerable force. Dr. Woodson H. Taulbee was almost immediately on the scene and rendered first aid to Mr. Merz and Mrs. Hill.

In a short time Mr. Merz, whose injury is in his back, rallied sufficiently to be placed on a car and was taken to his home.

Mrs. Hill, whose injuries are a broken right arm and a bruised body and face was placed in Conklin's ambulance and taken to her home at "Squire Dressel's". Mr. Sherman Arm and Mr. Jas. H. Hall picked Mrs. Hill up. She was lifeless for a while.

In a few hours Supt. Holliday had the car back on the track. Traffic was not delayed.

There were about five passengers on the car besides Mr. Merz and Mrs. Hill, among them being Mr. Sherman Arm, Mr. Jas. H. Hall, Mr. Fred Arm, Jr., Mr. William Martin and one other.

The accident was unavoidable and the car was not speeding.

The last reports from Mr. Merz and Mrs. Hill were that they were resting well this morning.

PARLEYING

But A Great European War Seems Inevitable

Russia and Austria Are Negotiating

London, England, July 31.—There are only two factors tonight giving the faintest hope of averting a general European war.

First—Russia and Austria are engaged again in direct negotiations.

Second—Both Great Britain and France are using their utmost endeavors in favor of peace.

On the other hand, Russia has ordered a general mobilization and Germany has declared a state of siege, which is undoubtedly a prelude to war if it does not cover mobilization.

London, July 31.—A dispatch from Berlin to Reuters Telegram Company says that a state of war has been proclaimed in Germany.

Berlin, July 31.—A decree proclaiming martial law and the prohibition of publication of news of the movements of German troops and war material was issued today. The proclamation announced military measures on the frontiers, armed protection of the railroads and the restriction of telegraphic, postal and railroad services, except for military purposes.

Russians Blow Up Bridge.
London, July 31.—A central news dispatch from Berlin says the Russian troops today blew up the frontier railroad bridges of the Warsaw-Vienna railroad.

"State of War" is Explained.
London, July 31.—The "state of war" proclaimed in Germany means, in other words, martial law under which the military authorities take charge of the situation in conformity with Paragraph 68 of the constitution of the German empire. The kingdom of Bavaria, however, is excluded from the operation of today's proclamation, and it desires to issue a similar decree if it desires to do so, as it is an independent kingdom. Today's proclamation was signed by the German emperor as king of Prussia.

German Export War Measures.
Berlin, July 31.—The German Federal council today issued a decree prohibiting exports of grain, flour, foodstuffs, meats, animal products, automobiles, trucks, motorcycles, petroleum, coal tar and coal oil. This goes into effect immediately. The step taken by the Federal council, whose members represent the rulers of the Federated States, composing the German empire, was said to have been necessitated by the heavy exports of the past few days reported by the chambers of commerce. It was semi-officially announced that the matters dealt with by the Federal council were of "secondary importance."

No Hope of Averting War
London, July 31.—Official announcement of the resumption of the "conversations" at St. Petersburg and Vienna came today at a moment when pessimism had taken possession of all Europe. The hope that it might lead to a peaceable solution was grasped with desperation, but the news was offset later by the proclamation of martial law in Germany, which was regarded as a preliminary to the mobilization of the German forces for war. Every body then seemed to settle down to await the news that the great European powers had decided to engage in a struggle for supremacy. There was nothing to give the public hope that a general war might be averted.

The stock exchange in London and the big provincial cities as well as those on the continent were closed owing to the breakdown of the credit system, which was made complete by the postponement of the Paris settlement. This, it was pointed out, would necessitate some fifty members of the London stock exchange.

French Deputy Assassinated.
Paris, France, July 31.—Jean Leon Jaures, the noted Socialist deputy, was assassinated tonight while dining in a small restaurant near the Bourse. The assassin was arrested, but refused to disclose his identity. Later he was identified as Raoul Villain, 29 years old, and said to be the son of a clerk of the civil court at Rheims.

Wall paper, rugs and paint at HEN-DRICKSON'S.

AUTO MIX-UP

Yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock an auto truck going east swerved in the wrong direction and struck an auto coming west at Donovan's corner, damaging the auto. In some manner Dr. Chynpola's buggy got in the mixup and had one of the front wheels torn off. Luckily no one was hurt.

MRS. NANNIE T. ABBOTT
Young Wife and Former Maysville Girl
Is Called By Death After a Few Days' Illness.

Death loves a shining mark.
The illness of Mrs. Nannie Thompson Abbott at Marietta, Ga., ended in The Ledger of Thursday and Friday terminated in her sudden death Friday evening at 6 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Thompson were with their daughter when the end came and the sad event was heart-breaking to them as she was ill only three days.

Last night Mr. T. J. Bacon received the following telegram from Mr. Thompson at Marietta:

"Nannie died at 6 o'clock. Will arrive at Maysville 8:25 Saturday evening. Funeral Monday at 2 p. m. from residence."

Deceased was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allie H. Thompson and was only last year married to Dr. A. P. Abbott of the Government service, now located at Marietta, Ga. One sister, Miss Susie Thompson also survives.

She was 21 years old last April and was married to Dr. Albert P. Abbott on October 5, 1911.

The sudden death of this lovely and amiable young woman comes as the saddest of sad news. Every one esteemed her for her many traits of character which appealed to all who loved a sunny and hopeful nature.

She was a devoted member of the Maysville Christian Church.

The remains will reach here tonight at 8:25 over the L. & N. and will be taken to the stricken parent's home in East Third street, where she was recently the cheery and laughing guest of her parents and sister.

Funeral services Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home, with her pastor, Rev. A. P. Stahl of the Maysville Christian Church in charge. Burial in the Maysville Cemetery.

The dove shooting season opens today.

CHAPTER XXI.—Continued.

"I did not see the register at the Inn. I did not know till afterwards that we were not booked. Once upstairs, I refused to remove my hat or my vest or my coat. I brought my friend to me. He pretended to be very angry over his friend's failure to be there beforehand, as he had promised. He ordered a supper served in the room. I did not eat anything. Somehow I was beginning to understand, vaguely of course, but surely—and bitterly, Mr. Wendall. Suddenly he threw off the mask.

"He coolly informed me that he knew the kind of a girl I was. I had been on the stage. He said it was no use trying to work the marriage game on him. He was too old a bird and his wits. I was horrified, stunned. When I began to cry out in my fury, he laughed at me but swore he would marry me even at that if it were not for the fact that he was already married. . . . I tried to leave the room. He held me. He kissed me a hundred times before I could break away. I—I tried to scream. . . . A little later on, when I was absolutely desperate, I—I snatched up the knife. There was nothing else left for me to do. I struck at him. He fell back on the bed. . . . I stole out of the house—oh, hours and hours afterward it seemed to me. I cannot tell you how long I stood there watching him. . . . I was crazed by fear. I—I—Redmond Wendall held up his hand.

"We will spare you the rest, Miss Castleton," he said, his voice hoarse and unnatural. "There is no need to say more."

"You—your—understand? You do believe me?" she cried.

He looked down at his wife's bowed head, and received no sign from her; then at the white, drawn faces of his children. They met his gaze and he read something in their eyes.

"I—I think your story is so convincing that we could not endure the shame of having it repeated to the world."

"I—I cannot ask you to forgive me, sir. I only ask you to believe me," she murmured brokenly. "I—I am sorry it had to be. God is my witness that there was no other way."

Mr. Carroll came to his feet. There were tears in his eyes.

"I think, Mr. Wendall, you will now appreciate my motives in—"

"Tardon me, Mr. Carroll, if I suggest that Miss Castleton does not require any defense at present," said Mr. Wendall stiffly. "Your motives were doubtless good. Will you be so good as to conduct us to a room where we may—may be alone for a short while?"

There was something tragic in the man's face. His son and daughter arose as if moved by an instinctive realization of a duty, and perhaps for the first time in their lives were submissive to an influence they had never before recognized before—a father's unalterable right to command. For once in their lives they were meek in his presence. They stepped to his side and stood waiting, and neither of them spoke.

Mr. Wendall laid his hand heavily on his wife's shoulder. She started, looked up rather vacantly, and then arose without assistance. He did not make the mistake of offering to assist her. He knew too well that to question her strength now would be but to invite weakness. She was strong. He knew her well.

She stood straight and firm for a few seconds, transfixing Hetty with a look that seemed to bore into the very soul of her, and then spoke.

"You ask us to be your judges?"

"I ask you to judge not me alone but—your son as well," said Hetty, meeting her look steadily. "You cannot pronounce me innocent without pronouncing him guilty. It will be hard."

Sara raised her head from her arms. "You know the way into my sitting-room, Leslie," she said, with singular directness. "Then sit across and draw her figure to its full height. 'Please remember that it is I who am to be judged. Judge me as I have judged you. I am not asking for mercy.'"

Hetty impulsively threw her arms about the rigid figure, and swept a splendid look from one to the other of the four stony-faced Wendalls.

"They turned away without a word or a revealing look, and slowly moved off in the direction of the boudoir. They who remained behind stood still, motionless as statues. It was Vivian who opened the library door. She closed it after the others had passed through, and did not look behind."

Half an hour passed. Then the door was opened and the tall old man advanced into the room.

"There was Nothing Else Left for Me to Do."

Hetty impulsively threw her arms about the rigid figure, and swept a splendid look from one to the other of the four stony-faced Wendalls.

"We have found against my son, Miss Castleton," he said, his lips twitching. "He is not here to speak for himself, but he has already been judged. We, his family, apologize to you for what you have suffered from the conduct of one of us. Not one but all of us believe the story you have told. This must never be retold. We ask this of all of you. It is not in our hearts to thank Sara for shielding you, for her hand is still raised against us. We are fair and just. If you had come to us on that wretched night and told the story of my son's infamy, we, the Wendalls, would have stood between you and the law. The law could not have touched you then; it shall not touch you now. Our verdict, if you choose to call it that, is sealed. No man shall ever hear from the lips of a Wendall the smallest part of what has transpired here tonight. Mr. Carroll, you were right. We thank you for the counsel that led this unhappy girl to place herself in our hands."

"Oh, God, I thank thee—I thank thee!" burst from the lips of Sara Wendall. She strained Hetty to her breast.

"It is not for us to judge you, Sara," said Redmond Wendall, speaking with difficulty. "You are your own judge, and a harsh one you will find yourself. As for ourselves, we can only look upon your unpeakable design as the working of a temporarily deranged mind. You could never have carried it out. You are an honest woman. At the last you would have revolted, even with victory assured. Perhaps Leslie is the only one who has a real grievance against you in this matter. I am convinced that he loved Miss Castleton deeply. The worst hurt is his, and he has been your most devoted advocate during all the years of bitterness that has existed between you and us. You thought to play him a foul trick. You could not have carried it to the end. We leave you to pass judgment on yourself."

"I have already done so, Mr. Wendall," said Sara. "Have I not accused myself before you? Have I not confessed to the only crime that has been committed? I am not proud of myself, sir."

"You have hated us well."

"And you have hated me. The crime you hold me guilty of was committed years ago. It was when I robbed you of your son. To this day I am the leper in your path. I may be forgiven for all else, but not for allowing Chas. Wendall to become the husband of Sebastian Gooch's daughter. That is the unpardonable sin."

Mr. Wendall was silent for a moment.

"You still are Sebastian Gooch's daughter," he said distinctly. "You can never be anything else."

She paled. This last transaction proved it, you would say?

"This last transaction, yes."

She looked about her with troubled, questioning eyes.

"I—I wonder if that can be true," she murmured, rather piteously. "Am I so different from the rest of you? Is the blood to blame?"

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Mr. Carroll nervously. "Don't be silly, Sara, my child. That is not what Mr. Wendall means."

Wendall turned his face away.

"You loved as deeply as you hate, Sara," he said, with a curious twitching of his lips. "My son was your god. We are not inhuman to that. Perhaps we have never realized until now the depth and breadth of your love for him. Love is a bitter judge of its enemies. It knows no mercy. It knows no reason. Hate may be conquered by love, but love cannot be conquered by hate. You had reason to hate my son. Instead you persisted in your love for him. We owe you something for that, Sara. We owe you a great deal more than I find myself able to express in words."

Leslie entered the room at this instant. He had his overcoat on and carried his gloves and hat in his hand.

"We are ready, father," he said thickly.

After a moment's hesitation, he crossed over to Hetty, who stood beside Sara.

"I—I can now understand why you refused to marry me, Miss Castleton," he said, in a queer, jerky manner. "Won't you let me say that I wish you all the happiness still to be found in this rather uneven world of ours?"

The crowning testimonial to an absolutely sincere ego!

CHAPTER XXII.

Renunciation.

On the third day after the singular trial of Hetty Castleton in Sara's library, young Mrs. Wendall's room drew up in front of a lofty office building in lower Broadway. Its owner stepped down from the limousine and entered the building. A few moments later she walked briskly into the splendid offices of Wendall & Co., private bankers and steamship-owners. The clerks in the outer offices stared for a moment in significant surprise, and then bowed respectfully to the beautiful silent partner in the great concern.

It was the first time she had been seen in the offices since the tragic event that had served to make her a member of the firm. A boy at the information desk, somewhat impressed by her beauty and the trim elegance of her long black broad-tail coat, so nothing of the dark eyes that shone through the narrow veil, forgot the dignity of his office and went so far as to politely ask her who she wanted to see and "what name, please."

The senior clerk rushed forward and transmitted the new boy, with a glare.

"A new boy, Mrs. Wendall," he made haste to explain. To the new boy's surprise, the visitor was conducted with much bowing and scraping into the private offices, where no one ventured except by special edict of the powers.

"Who was it?" he asked, in some awe, of a veteran stenographer who came up and sneered at him.

"Mrs. Chas. Wendall, you little simpleton," said she, and for once he failed to snip back.

It is of record that for nearly two whole days, he was polite to every visitor who approached him and was generally worth his salt.

Sara found herself in the close little room that once had been her husband's, but was now scrupulously held in reserve for her own use. Rather a waste of space, she felt as she looked monkey in a crude wooden cage strapped to her back. On closer observation one would have recognized Sara's peculiarly gipsy-like features in the face of the girl, and then one would have noticed the caption written in red ink at the bottom of the photograph: "The Trumhills' Fancy Dress Ball, January 10, '07. Sara as Gipsy Mab."

With a start, Sara came out of her painful reverie. She passed her hand over her eyes, and seemed thereby to put the polite senior clerk back into the picture once more.

"No, thank you. Is Mr. Redmond Wendall down this afternoon?"

"He came in not ten minutes ago. Mr. Leslie Wendall is also here. Shall I tell Mr. Wendall you wish to see him?"

"You may tell him that I am here, if you please," she said.

"I am very sorry about the ink wets, madam," murmured the clerk. "We were not expecting—"

"Pray don't let it disturb you, Mr. Inncroft. I shall not use them today."

"They will be properly filled by tomorrow."

"Thank you."

He disappeared. She relaxed in the familiar, comfortable old leather-upholstered chair, and closed her eyes. There was a sharp little line between them, but it was hidden by the veil.

The door opened slowly and Redmond Wendall came into the room. She rose at once.

"This is—er—an unexpected pleasure, Sara," he said perplexed and ill-at-ease. He stopped just inside the door he had been careful to close behind him, and did not offer her his hand.

"I came down to attend to some business, Mr. Wendall," he said.

"Business?" he repeated, staring.

She took note of the tired, haggard look in his eyes, and the tightly compressed lips.

"I intend to dispose of my entire interest in Wendall & Co.," she announced calmly.

He took a step forward, plainly startled by the declaration.

"What's this?" he demanded sharply.

"We may as well speak plainly, Mr. Wendall," she said. "You do not owe to have me remain a member of the firm, nor do I blame you for feeling as you do about it. A year ago you offered to buy me out—or off, as I took it to be at the time. I had reasons then for not selling out to you. Today I am ready either to buy or to sell."

"You—you name me," he exclaimed.

"Does you offer of last December still stand?"

"I—I think we would better have Leslie in, Sara. This is most unexpected. I don't quite feel up to—"

"Have Leslie in by all means," she said, resuming her seat.

DIDN'T READ ALL THE SIGNS

Amateur Sleuth Should Have Noticed That His Victim Was a Man of Quick Temper.

The one was a young man with the light of ambition to be a detective shining in his eyes; the other a middle-aged man, who was wearing a newspaper.

"Great man, wasn't he?" queried the young man at last.

"Who?" asked the other as he looked up.

"Sherlock Holmes."

"So I've heard."

"If there are others," continued the young man as a snail of self-satisfaction lighted up his face.

"Yes."

"For instance, you are a bookkeeper. I can tell by the ink stain on your fingers. You are a careless man in money matters, as that dollar peeping out of your change pocket clearly proves."

"Anything more?" asked the man with the paper.

"You were brought up in the country, as your bow legs tell at a glance. You are something of a sport, as I assured myself when I saw you reading that article about Corbett. From the way you cock your eye should be willing to bet that you are fond of the ballet and always have a front seat."

"Is that all?"

"That's about all, and I'd like to know if I have hit you off?"

"If that is all, then let me tell you something. You are an acrobat."

"Acrobat?—ha! ha! ha! What makes you think that?"

"Because," said the other, as he seized him by the neck and knee and carried him out to the platform; "because you take such a beautiful tumble to yourself."

And he lifted him up and gave him a heave which landed him in the mud and left him sprawling over half a block.

Why She Mourned.

"Boo-hoo!" sobbed the lady.

"What are you crying about?" the man asked.

"You know the bread and the jelly I sent to the fair?"

"Yes. Didn't it take a prize? Well, cheer up—those judges—"

"But it did take a prize—they both took first prizes—boo-hoo!"

"Well, what are you crying about?"

"The bread took first prize as best specimen of concrete, and jelly as the best china cement!"

Island Paradise of Birds.

On one little island in Gatun Inke, formerly known as Lion Hill, before the impounded waters of the Chagres River isolated it from the rest of the Canal Zone, are more species of birds than in any one locality in the western hemisphere. E. A. Goldman of the biological survey, department of agriculture, in two short collecting trips to Panaman has procured about 300 different species, and it is estimated that a larger variety is to be found within the limits of the Canal Zone than in any one state in the United States—about 900.

In the neighborhood of Gatun, at the Atlantic entrance of the Canal Zone, no less than 250 species have been found.

Good Ones.

"Do you want me to misrepresent the goods and any they are fine when they are not?" asked the new salesman.

"Yes," sternly answered the unscrupulous dealer. "Always remember that our assets are your liabilities."

She hesitated a moment, opened his lips as if to speak, and then abruptly left the room.

Sara smiled.

Many minutes passed before the two Wendalls put in an appearance. She understood the delay. They were telephoning to certain legal advisers.

"What's this I hear, Sara?" demanded Leslie, extending his hand after a second's hesitation.

She shook hands with him, not listlessly but with the vigor born of nervousness.

"I don't know what you've heard," she said pointedly.

His slim fingers went searching for the end of his moustache.

"Why—why, about selling out to us," he stammered.

"I am willing to retire from the firm of Wendall & Co.," she said.

"Father says the business is as good as it was a year ago, but I don't agree with him," said the son, trying to look lugubrious.

"Then you don't care to repeat your original proposition?"

"Well, the way business has been falling off—"

"Perhaps you would prefer to sell out to me," she remarked quietly.

"Not at all!" he said quickly, with a surprised glance at his father. "We couldn't think of letting the business pass out of the Wendall name."

"You forget that my name is Wendall," she rejoined. "There would be no occasion to change the firm's name; merely its membership."

"Our original offer stands," said the senior Wendall stiffly. "We prefer to buy."

"And I to sell. Mr. Carroll will meet you tomorrow, gentlemen. He will represent me as usual. Our business as well as social relations are about to end, I suppose. My only regret is that I cannot further accommodate you by changing my name. Still you may live in hope that time may work even that wonder for you."

She arose. The two men regarded her in an aggrieved way for a moment.

"I have no real feeling of hostility toward you, Sara," said Leslie nervously. "In spite of all that you said the other night."

"I am afraid you don't mean that, deep down in your heart, Leslie," she said, with a queer little smile.

"But I do," he protested. "Hang it all, we—live in a glass house ourselves. Sara, I dare say, in a way, I was quite as unpleasant as the rest of the family. You see, just can't help being snobs. It's in us, that's all there is to it."

Mr. Wendall looked up from the floor, his gaze having dropped at the first outburst from his son's lips.

"We—prefer to be friendly, Sara. If you will allow us—"

She laughed and the old gentleman stopped in the middle of his sentence.

"We can't be friends, Mr. Wendall," she said, suddenly serious. "The pretence would be a mockery. We are all better off if we allow our paths, our interests to diverge today."

"Perhaps you are right," said he, compressing his lips.

"I believe that Vivian and I could—but not I won't go so far as to say that either. There is something gone about her. Strange to say, I have never disliked her."

"If you had made the slightest effort to like us, no doubt we could have—"

"My dear Mr. Wendall," she interrupted quickly. "I credit you with the desire to be fair and just to me. You have tried to like me. You have even deceived yourself at times. I—but why these gentle reminiscences? We merely prolong an unfortunate contest between antagonistic natures, with no hope of genuine peace being established. I do not regret that I am your daughter-in-law, nor do I believe that you would regret it if I had not been the daughter of Sebastian Gooch."

"Your father was as little impressed with my son as I was with his daughter," said Redmond Wendall drily. "I am forced to confess that he was the better bargain. We had the better of the bargain."

"I believe you mean it, Mr. Wendall," she said, a note of gratitude in her voice. "Good-bye Mr. Carroll will see you tomorrow." She glanced quickly about the room. "I shall send for—certain articles that are no longer required in conducting the business of Wendall & Co."

With a quaint little smile, she indicated the two photographs of herself.

"My Jove, Sara," burst out Leslie abruptly. "I wish you'd let me have that Gipsy Mab picture. I've always been dotty over it. Don't you know. Rippling study."

Her lip curled slightly.

"As a matter of fact," he explained conclusively, "Chal often said he'd leave it to me when he died. In a joking way, of course, but I'm sure he meant it."

"You may have it, Leslie," she said slowly. It is doubtful if he correctly interpreted the movement of her head as she uttered the words.

"Thanks," said he. "I'll hang it in my den, if you don't object."

"We shall expect Mr. Carroll tomorrow, Sara," said his father, with an air of finality. "Good-bye. May I ask what plans you are making for the winter?"

"They are very indefinite."

"I say, Sara, why don't you get married?" asked Leslie, surveying the Gipsy Mab photograph with undiluted admiration as he held it at arm's length. "Rippling! This to the picture."

She paused near the door to stare at him for a moment, unutterable scorn in her eyes.

"I've had a notion you were pretty keen about Brady Booth," he went on amiably.

She caught her breath. There was no instant's hesitation on her part before she replied.

"You have never been very smart at making love guesses, Leslie," she said. "It's a trick you haven't acquired."

He laughed uncomfortably. "Neat stroke, that."

Following her into the corridor outside the office, he pushed the elevator bell for her.

"I meant what I said, Sara," he remarked, somewhat doggedly. "You ought to get married. Chal didn't leave much for you to cherish. There's no reason why you should go on like this, living alone and all that sort of thing. You're young and beautiful and—"

"Oh, thank you, Leslie," she cried out sharply.

"You see, it's going to be this way: Hetty will probably marry Booth. That's on dit, I take it. You're depending on her for companionship. Well, she'll quit you cold after she's married. She will—"

She interrupted him peremptorily.

"If Chal did nothing else for me, Leslie, he at least gave me you to cherish. Once more, good-bye."

The elevator stopped for her. He strode back to his office with a puzzled frown on his face. She certainly was inexplicable!

The angry red faded from her cheeks as she sped homeward in the automobile. Her thoughts were no longer of Leslie but of mother. . . . She sighed and closed her eyes, and her cheeks were pale.

Workmen from a picture dealer's establishment were engaged in hanging a full length portrait in the long living-room of her apartment when she reached home. She had sent to the country for Booth's picture of Hetty, and was having it hung in a conspicuous place.

Passing the open library door, Sara paused for an instant to peer within. Then she went on down the hall to her own sitting-room. The canary was

The season for shooting the peaceful dove seems to be open in all countries.

Old Kentucky is never so happy as when the ballots are dropping in the boxes.

Republicans, Hon. Richard P. Ernst is a loyal party man and deserves your vote.

It's a "dog fight" between Beckham, Stanley and McCreary, and if the "best man wins" it's going to be John Crepps Wickliffe Beckham.

A West Union Republican suggests that the people are now engaged in "watchful waiting"—waiting for an opportunity to vote the Republican ticket.

The resignation of the Rev. Mr. Gwatney, of a Winchester Baptist church, has been accepted. Tension between the pastor and flock is said to have grown out of prohibition views.

SENTIMENTALITY INSANITY IN FRANCE.

Persons of ordinary intelligence who have followed the Caillaux trial will not be surprised at the verdict of acquittal returned. Every species of cheap, silly sentimentality and of bizarre theatricalism was paraded on the well-set stage in an effort to prevent the wife of the former Cabinet Minister from paying the penalty for slaying M. Calmette.

There are many things in the procedure of American courts worthy of condemnation, but no one can imagine such scenes as were described at this trial as occurring in an American temple of justice. Even the woman whose desire for revenge seems to have hastened the tragic denouement which ended the life of the newspaper man spoke little of justice and equality. The burden of her complaint was that this woman "who robbed me of my husband has been given all the sympathy."

The closing scenes of the trial must have been worth the price of admission. Imagine the wild cheering of a mob afflicted by hysteria, while contending factions bite and scratch like a pack of Kilkenny cats, simply because a woman with a past has been acquitted of a crime for which there may have been slight palliation, but no justification.

Then the contending lawyers in the case rush at each other, throw their arms around each others' necks and plant resounding kisses on each others' cheeks.

In the language of the street, "can you beat it?" Justice? Phew!—Commercial Tribune.

They're off—and some of 'em away off!

Don't be sad. We'll have two more elections this fall.

And the high cost of war don't seem to bother anybody.

Now would be a good time for Uncle Sam to keep an eye on Japan.

There is no discounting the fact that President Wilson deserves much praise for the manner in which he has thus far peacefully settled the Mexican question.

Ernst would make an ideal United States Senator. He is a highclass business man and a leader who would well fill the shoes of the late Senator Bradley. Vote for Dick Ernst.

INVESTIGATING THE BAD EGG.

The latest to come to town is the egg inspector. What next? The local merchants have been given orders to inspect the farmers eggs. It behooves the farmers to see to it that the eggs he takes to market are uniform in size, color, all big and not more than one day old. This is an age of inspection, also and age of Democratic rule, egglessly true, don't you know.—West Union (O.) Record.

WAR SHOOT CHICAGO

WHEAT PRICES SKYWARD
 War ran up wheat transactions Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade to a total of nearly 100,000,000 bushels and shot prices skyward 8 1-4 to 9 1-4 cents. No other day of the Twentieth century has witnessed trading here that was equally wild.

Although failures were momentarily looked for, there was none announced.

How hazardous the situation was deemed was shown by the action of leading firms in demanding that all customers put margins of 20 cents a bushel on every trade.

Stories of fortunes made and lost today were numerous, but in most cases were not well verified. The most specific case of sudden riches was that of a heretofore obscure pit trader who actually pocketed $25,000 which he had netted in an interval of exactly five minutes.

Hundreds of spectators thronged the galleries on "change and looked down upon the traders who struggled and tumbled about in the pits. The uproar made by the brokers was plainly audible in the streets surrounding the board and notwithstanding that the day was delightfully cool, it was noticeable that few if any of the traders in the wheat pit were not dripping with perspiration.

TRAINING THE IMAGINATION.

To illustrate the power of imagination a City Hall officer tells the story of the artist who had lost his reason and had been sent to the asylum. While he had his wild moments, he was entirely rational much of the time and furnished visitors who stopped to talk to him some conversation that caused them to take notice. His fame soon spread and everyone who came to the institution requested an interview with the former artist.

On one such occasion the inmate was talking, and apparently rationally enough with a visitor who said that he also was an artist. Hearing this statement the resident of the institution said to his visitor:

"That reminds me, I have just finished my masterpiece."

"Is that so?" asked the visitor. "I should like to see it."

"You shall," the artist replied, and he disappeared, reappearing in a few moments with a plain strip of canvas.

"Turn it around so I can see it," requested the visitor when the canvas was held before him.

"Oh, you're looking at the front of it now—can't you see the picture?"

"Yes," lied the visitor. "What is the title?"

"The title of that picture," was the reply, "is 'The Crossing of the Red Sea.'"

"But where is the Red Sea?"

"Rolled back to let the children of Israel cross."

"Where are they?"

"Just crossed."

"Where are the pursuing Egyptians?"

"Haven't come up yet."

President Wilson intends to appoint a successor to the late Justice Lurton, of the Supreme Court, before the present session of Congress adjourns.

James and Andrew Williams, farmers in Oklahoma, were arrested by United States officers on a charge of having negro boys shipped to them whom they held in peonage.

The "wet" and "dry" forces filed petitions for a local option election in Lexington September 28. The argument on the cases will be heard by Judge Bullock next Tuesday.

BUGS DESTROYING TOMATOES

Manchester, Ohio.—The tomato crop of this section is being destroyed by a new enemy, a worm, evidently a borer of some description very much resembling the tobacco worm. The pest attacks the green fruit, and entering the tomato, causes it to rot and become entirely useless.

RAILWAY BUILDING IN 1913.

According to a compilation by the Railway Age-Gazette the railway building during the calendar year 1913 amounted to 3,701 miles of new main line and 2,895 miles of auxiliary track, exclusive of sidings and yard track.

Montana led all the States with 375 miles of new road, and Texas was a close second with 356 miles. The State of Washington built 200 miles and no other States built as much as 200 miles. The construction in a number of States was in excess of 100 miles. In California it was 164; in North Dakota, 152; in Arkansas, 139; in Oregon, 122; in Illinois, 113; in Tennessee, 111; in Florida, 104; in Michigan, 103; in North Carolina, 103.

Kentucky is credited with forty-eight miles; Ohio with twenty-eight; Indiana with six; Missouri with thirty; Virginia with twenty-three and West Virginia with forty-three. Kentucky, it will be noted, built more road than any of her neighboring States, with the exception of Illinois and Tennessee. All these States, however, Tennessee and West Virginia excepted, have a much larger railway mileage than Kentucky. Kentucky is credited with having operated 3,682 miles of road in 1913, while Tennessee operated 3,678 and West Virginia 3,171.

Kentucky has only about nine miles of railroad for every 100 square miles of the State's area, and has one mile of railroad for every 639 inhabitants. There is obvious need of more rail roads, and they ought to come at a faster rate than is shown by the construction record of 1913.—Courier-Journal.

EUROPEAN WAR

Will Have a Powerful Effect on the United States.

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

Cost of insurance may touch a point where a fire would be preferable. Europe's insurance for peace in the shape of lack breaking navies and armies has reached that stage where England for one night as well light and get a respite from her German nightmare.

Each year sees Germany's navy more nearly approaching England's in power. Each year, also, France sees Germany getting farther and farther ahead of her in wealth, size and military strength.

If England is to remain safe in the possession of her earth-girdling empire the supremacy of her warships could better be maintained today than five years hence.

If France's dream of recovering Alsace-Lorraine is ever to come true, the realization must come quickly or never.

If Russia and not Austria is to be the mightiest power in the Southeastern Slav States, she might as well hit now.

Thus England, France and Russia each has a motive for quick action. Delay means more power to the other fellows.

These five nations are like so many athletes trained for action, but France and England resemble athletes past their prime and growing stale. Everyday prize fighter thinks he has one good fight left in him, but delay makes such a fight more and more hopeless.

It is 99 years this summer since Russia, Austria, France, England and what is now Germany were at war. Then France stood alone against the other four, which also had the assistance of Belgium, Holland, Sweden, Switzerland and Spain.

It was then all of Europe against one man—Napoleon—with Waterloo and St. Helena as the sequels. Since Napoleon there has been no general European war. The effect of one upon the United States would be powerful.

The first result would be very bad, because Europe would sell many millions of American securities in order to get gold or credit here. Such a selling would make a big dent in our stock market.

But the other effect would be advantageous for the United States. We are the greatest purveyors of raw materials in the world. Our grain and cotton, our oil and steel, our machinery and textiles, our meats and provisions would have an enormous boost.

Sales of American commodities to the warring folks of Europe would increase immensely and prices would also increase. That would compensate us for the stock market slump, which would be but temporary.

A great war has also the effect of wiping off the slate many minor problems. Slashing pictures in London would no longer be a favorite diversion, and strikes in Russia would disappear like a mist before a hurricane.

A WOMAN'S APPEAL

To all knowing sufferers of rheumatism, whether muscular or of the joints, sciatica, lumbago, headache, piles in the kidneys or neuralgia, palis, in a word to her for a home treatment which has repeatedly cured all of these troubles. She feels it her duty to send it to all sufferers FREE. You cure yourself at home, as thousands will testify—no change of climate being necessary. This simple discovery loosens uric acid from the blood, loosens the stiffened joints, purifies the blood and brightens the eyes, giving elasticity and tone to the whole system. If the above interests you, for proof address Mrs. N. SUMMERS, Box R. South Bend, Ind.

A great religious and educational campaign in Mexico which all Protestant denominations will unite, is planned now that country. Bishop Oldham, chairman of the general committee representing the various mission boards, has made the announcement.

PAROLE LAW WORKING WELL.

Henry M. Cox, State parole agent, whose duty is to keep track and control of the convicts released under the parole law, declared himself highly pleased with the workings of the parole system as construed by the decision of the Court of Appeals last winter. He states that of the 300 men released from prisons by this decision very few had been returned on account of misconduct, and that a large proportion of them were giving every indication of the working out their own salvation and becoming useful citizens.

FAMILY AVOIDS SERIOUS SICKNESS

By Being Constantly Supplied With Theford's Black-Draught.

McDuff, Va.—"I suffered for several years," says Mrs. J. B. Whitaker, of this place, "with sick headache, and stomach trouble."

Ten years ago a friend told me to try Theford's Black-Draught, which I did, and I found it to be the best family medicine for young and old.

I keep Black-Draught on hand all the time now, and when my children feel a little bad, they ask me for a dose, and it does them more good than any medicine they ever tried.

We never have a long spell of sickness in our family, since we commenced using Black-Draught."

Theford's Black-Draught is purely vegetable, and has been found to regulate weak stomachs, aid digestion, relieve indigestion, colic, wind, nausea, headache, sick stomach, and similar symptoms.

It has been in constant use for more than 70 years, and has benefited more than a million people.

Your druggist sells and recommends Black-Draught. Price only 25c. Get a package 10-day. N. C. 12

"Tuxedo is always welcome. A pleasant smoke, a mental brace—the ideal tobacco."

You Smoke a "Better" Tobacco —Why Not Smoke The Best?

THE tobacco you now smoke you consider "better tobacco than you ever smoked before." Naturally, you kept trying until you found a "better" one.

But it stands to reason that since there is a difference in tobaccos, you may be missing still greater pleasure in a still better smoke—in the BEST smoke, in fact.

Tuxedo is the best smoke because no better tobacco leaf grows, and no process of treating tobacco leaf equals the original "Tuxedo Process."

Tuxedo

The Perfect Tobacco for Pipe and Cigarette

We know that Tuxedo is made of the BEST tobacco—rich, mellow, perfectly aged Kentucky Burley. None better can be bought, because none better is grown.

It is treated by the famous original "Tuxedo Process" for removing the sting and bite of the natural vegetable oils.

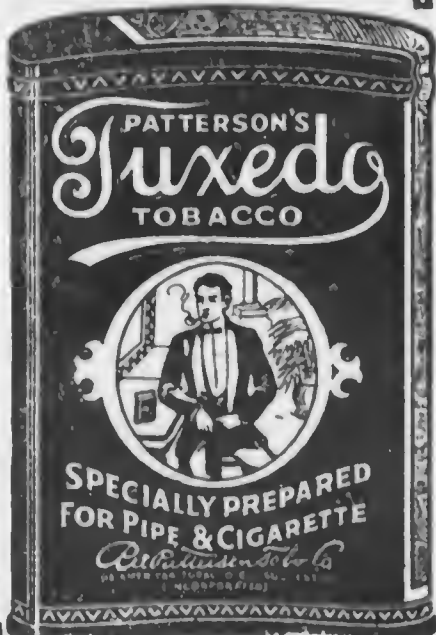

Tuxedo was born in 1904. Its first imitator appeared two years later. Since then a host of imitations have sprung up.

No other tobacco can give the unique pleasure of Tuxedo because no other maker has yet been able to equal the Tuxedo quality.

COLDS AFFECT THE KIDNEYS

Many Maysville People Have Found This to Be True.

Are you writhed in bad weather? Does every cold settle on your kidneys? Does your back ache and become weak?

Are urinary passages irregular and distressing? These symptoms are cause to suspect kidney weakness.

Weakened kidneys need quick help. Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for weakened kidneys.

Grateful people recommend them. A. Surries, Locksmith, Aberdeen, O., says: "The action of my kidneys was irregular and the kidney secretions contained sediment. I had backache and when stooping, it was hard for me to straighten. Colds always settled on my kidneys. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they stopped the trouble, and my kidneys became strong."

The above is not an isolated case. Mr. Surries is only one of many in this vicinity who have gratefully endorsed Doan's. If your back aches—if you kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Surries had, five all stores. their homes this morning: Rev. F. Kelly, Boyd Nicholson, and Mrs. Harry Carroll and children.

That mule joke was surely cruel—to the mule. The poor brute after having been forcibly ejected without ceremony from the preacher's tent, spent the night in braying out in the woods expressive of his deep sorrow at being so cruelly treated. The guilty parties have not as yet been detected, but as a certain person was seen to be taking the names of that "hiking" party this morning, suspicions have arisen that those youngsters thought it would be a little more healthy on top of Sugar Loaf mountain today than at the campgrounds.

As we write these notes we are occasionally glancing at an entrancing sight. The sun is nearly down, its beautiful rays making a beautiful sight as they shine through the stately trees. Out on the campus are three or four games of croquet and a tennis court in full tilt, each game being watched by large crowds of spectators. What pleasure these people are having! One, who has not had a similar experience cannot appreciate the pleasure of these occasions. In a little while the supper bell at the hotel will ring, and "good night" for games! But supper will soon be disposed of, and as the shades of evening come on the folks can be seen promenading until church time.

Mrs. J. H. Dodson came out this afternoon to stay over Sunday. She is a guest at the Bierbower cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Wallingford were visitors in camp today.

Misses Maribel Simons and Almeida Huff are visitors at the Simons cottage.

Mrs. Minnie Wallingford of Maysville, joined the campers today.

Rev. L. E. Williams is the latest addition to the ever increasing force of ministers.

The young ladies of the camp, met at 9 a. m. today and formed an organization to be known as the Ruggles Camp meeting Club, with the following officers: Miss Virginia Mae Hurd, president; Miss Nellie Cooper, first vice president; Miss Lena Henderson, second vice president; and Miss Retha Herbert, secretary. As explained yesterday, this organization is for the promotion of the best interests of the campmeeting. The exact number of members was not obtainable but was large and the leaders are encouraged and the girls are enthusiastic.

Mr. John Trane who has been on the sick list for a few days is some improved this evening.

Rev. C. B. Plummer, a home boy was the morning preacher today. It has been so many years since a little red headed boy was playing in the camp meeting straw. Since entering the ministry he has made good, being the pastor of a growing church at Louisville, Ky. He was greeted by a large congregation of relatives and friends in addition to the regular campers. His sermon was good, well received and made a favorable impression on all. His relatives and friends have every reason to be glad that he has entered the ministry.

Dr. Buntin gave his fifth address this afternoon in his great series on Christian doctrine. There is no diminution of the interest in these meetings.

Dr. Lewis preached this evening from the text "I will arise and go to my father." There were nearly a thousand people present.

And the campmeeting goes on. Not many more days for its pleasures. But the best is to come. From now until the end will be the biggest crowds and the better acquainted we get the more will all enjoy the days as they come and go.

We may be wrong, but we will always maintain that any woman who has to carry a gun to defend her honor has too much to defend.

The way of the transgressor is hard. Just about the time an ultra see-more skirt comes along the doggone sun dodges behind a cloud.

Tell a man that he is level-headed and he will want to buy you a drink. Tell him that he is flat-headed and he will want to knock your block off.

One reason why a man won't touch water the Night Before is because it takes about all there is in the river to get the Sea Lions, Door Mats, Old Muffs and Feather Pillows out of his mouth on the Morning After.

Once upon a time a man who had been married for ten years carelessly and thoughtlessly brought his wife home a box of candy. And four doctors had to work for eight hours before the poor woman recovered from the shock.

A man has a little respect for an enemy unit who sets fire to an orphan asylum. But a guy who catches four of a kind when you are holding a pat full house is seven degrees lower than a Sioux Indian who feeds his baby on snakes.

There is a whole lot in a name. Twenty years ago the section hands on the railroads wore cheap outfits known as Band Hogs and Grease Monk Suits. Now the railroad officials are wearing the same thing, but they have changed the name to Palm Beach Suits.

Mixing a Little Fun With Religion at Ruggles Campmeeting—Richardson's Newswy Letter is Full of "Pep"

Ruggles Campgrounds, July 29, 1914.

The annual meeting of the Campmeeting Association took place at 9 a. m. today. The Association is composed of the ministers of the Ashland and Covington Districts with the laymen on the Board of Directors. A large attendance was present. The reports showed the Association to be in a thriving condition. The present Board of Directors was re-elected as follows: Pastors of the churches at Maysville, East Maysville, Tolsonboro and Vanclevor, with laymen I. M. Lane, John B. Brodt, M. A. Wallingford, W. P. Bowman and J. R. Hinton. The officers of the Association are President J. G. Dover; vice president, W. H. Dickerson; Secretary, C. B. Plummer; Treasurer, M. A. Wallingford.

Immediately upon the adjournment of the Association, the Board of Directors met to organize for next year. Officers were chosen as follows: President, I. M. Lane; Secretary, J. M. Lital; Treasurer, M. A. Wallingford. They then adjourned to meet Monday at 9 a. m. to close up the business interests of the present meeting.

A big bunch of our young folks were up with the birds this morning, preparatory to a hike to Sugar Loaf mountain. It was a gay party that started a little after six o'clock with lunches and other necessary things for a journey. The following composed the party:

C. G. Degman, driver of the Ambulance Wagon.

Miss Lottie Hoskins and Mrs. J. H. Richardson, chaperons.

"Teddy" Muse, chief inspector of terrapins.

Howard Richardson, inspector of bugs and trees.

John Will Hardynan, male inspector.

Richard Thomas and Charles Coryell and Gusty Parrow, scouts.

Howard Trent, chief ladies' man.

Indian Madden, Grace Morris, Ida Owens, Florida Glicker and Myrtle Wicks.

Girls to See that Trent Didn't tlet East: Misses Julia Griffith, Carrie Muse, Lillie Muse, Fannie Soyester, Mary Willis and Sarah Marshall, and Nannie May Kelly.

They report the time of their lives. However, it could be plainly seen that they were a werry bunch that "kiew in" the grounds late in the afternoon. But they climbed the mountain, and were consequently happy.

has been in progress we've set a new record in expanding the buying power of a dollar. For the significance of the prices we've been quoting lies not merely in the fact that they are low, but that they are quoted on present season Knuppenheimer clothes—merchandise whose value is standard the world round.

No one's backstop stock, nothing from a real or imaginary fire, flood or tornado, no million dollar purchase from some poor manufacturer who, pushed in the wall throws up his hands and sells at 25 cents on the dollar.

Every suit offered in this tremendous clearance is guaranteed to be a 1931 summer production from the House of Knuppenheimer, and purchased for our regular stock in the regular way.

220 Suits—including a specially fine showing of Tuxedo suits in Greenock, Ladybugs, Galschle and Seikitz patterns, tailored by Knuppenheimer in June 1931 styles, now $18.75.

220 Suits, a specially fine assortment for around town and business wear: English checks, pin stripes, chalk stripes in greys, blues, browns and blacks, all in original Knuppenheimer styles, now $15.

418 suits, including many advanced young men's styles in Norfolk, and two-piece suits in navy, sea breeze, woads, cracker and homespun, now priced at $12.50.

RIVER MEN KICKING.

River and steamboat men are making a kick on the condition of the Ohio at Dam 26, near Gallipolis, made this way by government engineers. A space of only one hundred and sixty feet is left for boats to go through the pass. The current there is very strong and makes passage dangerous. The Steamer Greenwald with a party of Cincinnati excursionists, was five hours getting through the pass.

LOOKS LIKE YOUNG

Mason County Man May Be the Democratic Congressional Nominee in Tomorrow's Primary Election

The Colonel Has Made a Remarkable Canvass and Friends Say He Will Sweep the Ninth District

That the Democratic political map of the Ninth Congressional District is about to undergo a change seems to be self-evident if there are any "sure things" in the prognostications of men who know which way the wind is blowing.

The most interesting fight in this district is the race for the Democratic Congressional nomination.

The contest opened with Fields in the lead against all comers, then Haney entered and was hot on Fields' trail. Now there is a new Richmond in the arena, and he, in a few short weeks, is not only makes Fields and Haney sit up and look scared, but it looks to the knowing ones, like this new entrant will be the winner in tomorrow's Primary.

His name is Col. James Monroe Young of Maysville, and his father was the late Hon. John D. Young of Bath county, who represented the Ninth District in Congress with distinguished credit and ability.

Col. Young is making a most remarkable campaign. The mountains counties are said to be aflame for him.

Mr. E. L. Manchester, who was in Lawrence county this week, declares that every Democratic voter he met is for Young.

Hon. Edgar B. Hager, of Ashland, who is one of Col. Young's leading supporters, sent the following telegram to County Judge W. H. Rice of this city. It was dated at Cattlesburg, Ky., and read:

"J. M. YOUNG HAS MADE A FINE IMPRESSION HERE AND I HAVE NO DOUBT HE WILL WIN THE NOMINATION. I TRUST WE WILL ALL STAND TOGETHER TO THIS END."

Keep your eye on Young.

Mr. John Brislois is in Cincinnati today on business.

There are in the United States about 125,000 telephone girls.

A most attractive line of Seamless Brussels tings, room size, now $8.50 at Hunt's.

Great Britain imports more than 20,000,000 bottles of mineral waters annually.

Among the 1,500 inhabitants in the Joliet, Ill., prison there is not one printer.

Two houses occupied by colored people at Flemingsburg and owned by Dr. Skinner, burned last night.

Mr. A. H. Thompson wires from Marietta, Ga., that his daughter, Mrs. A. P. Abbott is somewhat improved.

Mrs. C. R. Valentine and son Thomas Arnold are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Arnold at Danville, Ill.

Mrs. D. M. Curry left yesterday afternoon for Newport. She will accompany the remains of Mrs. Margaret Kinney to this city today.

Mrs. John D. Muse and daughter, Miss Julia, writes to their friends from Chautauqua Lake, New York, that they are enjoying a delightful visit.

Miss Martha Trapp writes from Detroit, Mich., that she is enjoying herself, in and around Detroit this hot weather, but there is no place like Maysville.

EXODUS FROM CINCINNATI
Hosts of foreigners will begin to leave Cincinnati before the end of the week to join the fatherland armies as the van of probably 1,000 men who will go to the front from Cincinnati, unless the war cloud passes, it was said by the leaders of the patriotic demonstrations.

A Summer-Time Dialogue Under Electric Breezes

"Isn't it a treat to get a bite to eat in here. Cool when there's not a breath of air stirring elsewhere."
"That's why I'm here. That electric fan is a wonder. Wish we had one at the office. I'm more comfortable right HERE than I've been all day and it's blazing outside."
Just a fragment of ordinary chatter overheard in a Quick-Lunch place, but there's a big commercial truth back of it. People DO find out where the comforts are greatest.

G-E Electric Fans

are keeping people cool at all hours of the day, whether at restaurant, home, or place of business. We can show you the ceiling type of fan for store or restaurant or the desk type for home or office. These different speeds regulating the circulation of air. Finished, if you wish, in colors to suit the surroundings.
